

Atheroma

Atheroma are the result from a congestion of the excretory duct for secretion of sebaceous glands. They consist of fat drops, fat crystals and epidermis cells. Atheroma are located mostly on hairy head-regions, in the face and in the neck, between waist and neck but also in other regions (e.g. genital area).